

HOMEPLANET

Nine generations ago a world was lost. What was saved of it sleeps in the hold of one Mothership: sixty thousand people, and the fleet that guards them. You command that fleet across twenty jumps to a planet that is only a name.

The Vekhar hold the lanes. They will come at every stop, in waves that never end, and the fleet only ever shrinks - a ship that is lost is lost. Mine, build, salvage the enemy's wrecks, and decide at every jump how much of the fleet you are willing to spend.

Orbit the battle in three dimensions. Give orders by 'squadron, from sixteen buttons by key or by joystick. Take the stick of one fighter yourself. Chase a runner through the vortex, and clear the lane in an arcade run between the jumps.

REQUIRES AN AMSTRAD CPC 6128 WITH 128K AND A DISC DRIVE. KEYBOARD OR JOYSTICK. Z80 ASSEMBLY, MODE 1, FOUR INKS. WRITTEN BY VASPER FOR REVIVE8BIT, 2026.
